Taiwan AI Summit 2026 Key Takeaways: From Cloud to Edge

MediaTek remains our Top Pick given its strong technology and execution in Cloud AI ASIC design services. Edge AI also has strong potential.

What's new? MediaTek co-COO and CFO Mr. David Ku joined our inaugural AI Summit to outline the company's future AI semi strategy. Management views AI as ubiquitous and plans to pursue a Cloud-to-Edge strategy to capture the opportunity. We also joined a large-group IR meeting for near-term updates.

Cloud AI: ASIC business development

- Management reiterated that MediaTek plans to keep adding customer value and differentiating by technology to avoid ASIC commoditization under the COT (customer-owned tooling) trend. MediaTek believes Cloud AI ASIC operating margin can stay above the corporate average.
- Regarding "full system rack support" for Google TPU, management clarified that MediaTek's system integration is through chiplet and interconnect technology, not rack systems or networking design.
- For agentic AI compute, MediaTek plans to participate in PC/server CPU opportunities through merchant or ASIC design services. The prior NVIDIA GB10 AI edge server is an example.
- The company doesn't think major ASIC designs are limited to either training or inference purposes. We therefore see volume upside for MediaTek's TPU v8 (ZebraFish) and v9 (HumuFish) vs. Street consensus which reflects MediaTek ASIC being used only for AI training.
- After securing the 2nm ASIC (should be TPU v9), the company is bidding for the next-generation project (which we think should be TPU v10 IceFish; see our 25 May 2026 report, MediaTek: "Target Price Up" report). We therefore see multi-year growth through 2030 (IceFish revenue contribution in 2029 and 2030).
- MediaTek said it has received several CSP RFQs and hopes to add one more CSP customer by end-2026 (besides Google).

Edge AI: Smartphone and automotive business

- The company said its future growth is "in addition" to smartphone, while smartphone should continue to grow with edge compute. The company doesn't rule out AI service providers reaching out to MediaTek for future AI phones, given MediaTek's strong turnkey capability.
- Management sees growth potential in Automotive.

Stay OW, maintain Top Pick: This reflects the company's strong technology and execution in Cloud AI ASIC design services. Edge AI also has strong potential.

Strong AI ASIC upside in 2028 from 2nm TPU

2nm TPU to adopt dual sourcing – both TSMC CoWoS-L and Intel EMIB

TSMC's CoWoS (Chip-on-Wafer-on-Substrate) is the industry's leading 2.5D packaging solution, particularly for AI and HPC applications. Its key advantage lies in the use of a high-density interposer or RDL layer, which enables extremely wide, low-latency connections between logic dies and HBM stacks. This makes it well suited for bandwidth-intensive workloads such as GPUs and AI accelerators.

However, these benefits come at a cost: CoWoS – particularly the silicon interposer/bridge – is expensive, capacity-constrained, and subject to yield challenges, including potential warpage issues at larger chip sizes. Cost and manufacturing complexity remain key trade-offs. As a result, we see TSMC's CoWoS roadmap supporting only up to ~9.7x reticle size, which does not appear sufficient for future AI or HPC chip designs.

We expect MediaTek to secure a portion of CoWoS capacity for 2nm TPU to ensure minimum volume production, but we believe it will use Intel's (covered by Joseph Moore) EMIB-T as the primary solution to reduce costs and scale volume in 2028, if execution proceeds well.

Margin trend and full-rack system support. In response to our question on providing full-rack support during its earnings call (referencing recent Broadcom-Google collaboration), MediaTek indicated it is in discussions with the customer. Management expects any full-rack system design support to materialize after 2027.

On margin trends, management highlighted continued value addition to the customer across both silicon and packaging design. As a result, ASIC should remain accretive to operating margins

Google 2nm TPU the major growth driver for MediaTek from 2028

On April 22, Google introduced TPU v8 at Google Cloud Next, featuring two purpose-built architectures for training and inference: TPU 8t and TPU 8i. Our recent supply chain checks across multiple companies on reticle size confirm that MediaTek's 3nm TPU 8 corresponds to TPU 8t. This supports our view that MediaTek's TPU performance should be sufficient for AI training.

According to Google's announcement, "both chips will be generally available later this year and can be used as part of Google's AI Hypercompute," in line with MediaTek's guidance that AI ASIC will contribute ~US$2bn of revenue in 2026 (we now assume 450-500k units at a US$4,500 ASP).

In addition, our recent checks suggest that ASP for the next-generation 2nm Humufish TPU, supported by MediaTek, could exceed our prior expectations, driven by an increased number of main dies. For Humufish, checks across multiple sources indicate the number of main dies per chip could significantly exceed Zebrafish (one compute die with one I/O die). Combined with a SerDes upgrade and larger packaging size, we estimate ASP at US$12-15k (we now model US$13k).

At the gross margin level, management indicated margins vary by project, which may also reflect potential full-rack system support. We model 2nm TPU gross margin at c.35% (vs. c.40% for 3nm TPU) given larger revenue scale, while we still expect operating margin at ~20-25%, above the smartphone BU's 15-20%.

Android AI agent phones as an emerging trend from Google I/O

Android AI agent phones – a trend to watch: Google is actively rolling out AI agents on Android phones, starting with Galaxy S26 and Pixel 10 in early 2026. These agents can perform multi-step tasks across apps – for example, ordering food, organizing notes, or creating calendar events through direct interaction with app UIs. Over time, we expect broader adoption across the Android ecosystem. Token consumption and cost remain key constraints for agentic AI, and we believe on-device computing on edge devices such as smartphones will help alleviate part of this cost burden.

Google I/O 2026 – Gemini evolves into an Agentic platform: At Google I/O 2026, Google repositioned Gemini from a chatbot to a proactive AI "personal agent" capable of autonomously handling tasks across apps and services. Google introduced several new technologies, including Gemini Spark – a persistent assistant operating in the background across Workspace tools – Gemini 3.5 Flash for faster real-time interaction, and Gemini Omni for advanced multimodal capabilities spanning text, audio, images, and video. The company also announced AI-driven changes to Google Search and deeper Gemini integration across Android, YouTube, shopping, and future XR devices, signaling a broader push to embed AI as a continuously available assistant that manages workflows and automates user tasks. We believe the agentic AI replacement cycle could start in 2027 from high-end Android phones – another option value on MediaTek.

Certain disclosures listed above are also for compliance with applicable regulations in non-US jurisdictions.

STOCK RATINGS

Morgan Stanley uses a relative rating system using terms such as Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated or Underweight (see definitions below). Morgan Stanley does not assign ratings of Buy, Hold or Sell to the stocks we cover. Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight are not the equivalent of buy, hold and sell. Investors should carefully read the definitions of all ratings used in Morgan Stanley Research. In addition, since Morgan Stanley Research contains more complete information concerning the analyst's views, investors should carefully read Morgan Stanley Research, in its entirety, and not infer the contents from the rating alone. In any case, ratings (or research) should not be used or relied upon as investment advice. An investor's decision to buy or sell a stock should depend on individual circumstances (such as the investor's existing holdings) and other considerations.

Global Stock Ratings Distribution

(as of April 30, 2026)
The Stock Ratings described below apply to Morgan Stanley's Fundamental Equity Research and do not apply to Debt Research produced by the Firm.
For disclosure purposes only (in accordance with FINRA requirements), we include the category headings of Buy, Hold, and Sell alongside our ratings of Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight. Morgan Stanley does not assign ratings of Buy, Hold or Sell to the stocks we cover. Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight are not the equivalent of buy, hold, and sell but represent recommended relative weightings (see definitions below). To satisfy regulatory requirements, we correspond Overweight, our most positive stock rating, with a buy recommendation; we correspond Equal-weight and Not-Rated to hold and Underweight to sell recommendations, respectively.

	Coverage Universe		Investment Banking Clients (IBC)			Other Material Investment Services Clients (MISC)
